Interesting Array of Figures Which Show the Effect of the Present Political Crisis Upon the Stock Market.

On, of the most interesting aspects of the present extraordinary political crisis is the effect which it has produced upon the stock market. According to the best obtainable estimates, there has been within the past fortnight a shrinkage of values amounting to about THREE HUNDRED MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Everybody realizes that the Democratic platform is going to demand free silver. This realization affects the market in various ways. Perhaps some great operators may be secretly willing to give the country an object lesson of the effect the free coinage policy would have upon prosperity. Suggestions to this effect have not been lacking. But undoubtedly much of the liquidation has been genuine. There has been sufficient panicky talk in the papers and among politicians to alarm small investors. Putting two and two together-the admittedly we inderful growth of silver sentiment and the disasters which local authorities have predicted from its success—there has been reason enough for timid speculators to take

The extent to which they have migrated in that direction is displayed in the figures. In twelve days from the time of McKinley's nomination, when confidence and stocks were at their highest, the total value of twenty-nine listed securities dealt in on the New York Stock Exchange, has shrunk by $59,260,000. The shrinkage in the hundreds of stocks not listed cannot be accurately fixed, but a careful estimate of the decline in this market puts it at $300,000,000. B urlington is worth $6,400,000 less than twelve days ago, Atchison $5,373,000, Sugar $6,000,000, Chicago Gas $2,000,000, Southern Railroad, $4,000,000, and so on down

Sugar went down 3% points yesterday, Manhattan 3%, Northwestern 3% and other stocks in proportion. The whole day was one of steady and rapid declines. There was a rush to sell from the tin te the Exchange opened. Frightened investors and bears continued to keep the market on the slide, but the efforts of the bears to create a panic were happily unsuccessful. Their rum or that $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 in gold would be shipped this week proved unfounded. Only $200,000 in gold was taken from the Sub-Treasury yesterday for shipment. The action of the Chicago Convention seems to be pretty thoroughly discounted by this time, and the actual adoption of a free coinage platform will not come as a shock and may not have much additional effect.
